>>Mary Mack: If you think about the number of employees that have retired or left Wells Fargo over time,

ON SCREEN GRAPHIC: Read articles about fellow alumni on the Wells Fargo Alumni home page.

>>Mary Mack: I started thinking how just that re-engagement the opportunity over time to reconnect with people and rebuild confidence could be valuable.

ON SCREEN GRAPHIC: Visit the Wells Fargo Alumni homepage and scroll through the Activity Feed to keep up with what's happening around the enterprise.

>>Charlie Scharf: This company's built on what the people who came before us did.

ON SCREEN GRAPHIC: Catch up with colleagues. The alumni Directory is the place to reconnect with former teammates.

>>Charlie Scharf: We want to make sure that people who used to work here feel connected. And we're reaching out to as many people as we can.

>>Mary Mack: If we could help them understand who is Wells Fargo today so that they can represent us.

ON SCREEN GRAPHIC: The Careers page hosts a number of opportunities within Wells Fargo.

>>Mary Mack: Maybe they moved their own relationship and they want to bring it back. Maybe they could refer people in their community.

>>Charlie Scharf: So many people put so much into this organization, and, if you retire or if you go on to do something else, that connection is always going to be there.
